Sekisui House contributes to sustainable development in the housing sector both in Japan and around the world, while also actively and comprehensively disclosing our initiatives sincerely and consistently to institutional investors and analysts. The company has been commended for the trust, leadership and quality of our communication achieved through these investor relations activities, which has led to Nakai being voted Best CEO for 3 years running.

In the ESG sector, Sekisui House has proactively accepted the enhanced interest in ESG management and related information disclosure of recent years, and so has released our 2022 Value Report - a combination of our Integrated Report, which is focused on financial information for investors, and our Sustainability Report, which includes information on our ESG activities. The company has also devoted itself to enhanced engagement with investors through individual discussions and investor forums, and selection this year is a recognition of these initiatives.

These rankings have been held by Institutional Investor since 2013 to select the publicly traded Japanese companies with superior investor relations activities. The selections are based on voting by buy-side analysts, money managers and sell-side researchers at securities firms and financial institutions that cover the region, including those who cast and received votes in this year's All-Japan Research Team surveys. Results reflect the opinions from 424 investors, portfolio managers and analysts from 172 firms, nominating a total of 505 companies.

Sekisui House aims to be a leading company in ESG (Environmental, Social, Governance) management, and through active and comprehensive information disclosure and communication, will continue to strive to gain the trust and appreciation of all stakeholders.
